

Trafficking Destroys Lives

Wildlife trafficking and human slavery threaten ecosystems and communities worldwide. Freeland works to protect vulnerable people and wildlife from organized crime and corruption, revitalizing ecosystems and communities for a more secure world.

Freeland Stops Trafficking and Protects Life

Freeland envisions a world where species flourish, ecosystems thrive, and communities live free of exploitation. Through counter-trafficking, community engagement, and public awareness, we foster collaboration to protect people, nature and wildlife from traffickers, while building resilient communities and ecosystems.

Our Global Reach

With active programs across Latin America, Africa, and Asia, Freeland is well known for building and empowering task forces, connecting civil society, and supporting local communities to create lasting change.

PLANETARY HEALTH APPROACH

Freeland's frontline approach incentivizes and empowers protectors of people and the environment.

Our 3-level approach

Freeland builds Task Forces through bespoke capacity programs for law enforcement that stop and prevent trafficking of people and wildlife.

We network them together with private and public sectors, and across borders and continents.

Empowered: We train and equip task forces with our Innovative Tools and Training Programs

Training: 6 different training courses are tailored for frontline protectors worldwide to stop trafficking of wildlife and people.

Technology: Our mobile app, online tools, maps and digital intelligence software help identify and report trafficking.

Online Learning Platform: Provides accessible, institutionalized curricula and resources for law enforcement and civil society.

Inclusive and Effective: We link task forces with civil society, jointly protecting Communities and Ecosystems

Vocational Support:

Help reformed poachers thrive through sustainable livelihoods like farming and eco-tourism.

Community Engagement:

Safeguarding human and wildlife habitats with monitoring systems, youth outreach and reforestation drives.

Building Global Demand for Prevention:

Facilitating a global alliance and "messenger network" which amplifies frontline One Health models, solutions, tools, and expertise.

IMPACT AND SUCCESS STORIES
